ACTIVE SAFETY

A core priority at Volvo is to provide designs that not only address ACTIVE safety – those safety features that help AVOID a crash – but also PASSIVE safety, those features that PROTECT the occupants in a crash.

VOLVO ENHANCED STABILITY TECHNOLOGY

One of the most visible examples of Volvo's leadership in active safety is VEST, or Volvo Enhanced Stability Technology. This system mitigates many jackknifes and rollovers through advanced sensing of multiple vehicle parameters and conditions, and automatically selectively applies tractor and trailer brakes to control the vehicle before an incident occurs. Volvo leads the industry in stability technology development for class 8 trucks and is the only manufacturer in North America to make it standard. Volvo has delivered more than 100,000 trucks with the technology, which accounts for more than half of all of the class 8 trucks equipped with stability technology.

VOLVO ENHANCED CRUISE

Volvo trucks feature the proprietary Volvo Enhanced Cruise (VEC), a system that works with the truck's cruise control to maintain a safe following distance between vehicles. VEC also has the capability to automatically slow the truck with the engine and foundation brakes to maintain a set following distance, while at the same time alerting the driver to potential danger. Using a radar sensor mounted in the front bumper, VEC monitors vehicles moving in the same direction as the truck. It can detect up to 32 objects within approximately 500 feet in front of the truck.

Proactive braking means the truck will slow down without driver intervention when necessary. If the vehicle in front slows down below the truck's cruise control set speed, VEC will sequentially reduce throttle to the engine, apply the engine brake and apply the foundation brakes to try to maintain the set following distance. The system applies about one-third of the foundation brake's capacity, meaning the driver always has full braking capability if needed.

If the vehicle in front speeds up and moves away, VEC will automatically increase vehicle speed to the cruise control set speed. VEC automatically intervenes only if the cruise control is on and the speed is set by the driver. VEC also warns drivers if the truck is too close to vehicles ahead. A beeping alert warns drivers if they are closing the distance. An uninterrupted modulating tone warns drivers to immediately apply the brakes or take evasive action if the distance is too short and closing speed is too high for VEC to maintain safe following distance, for example when another vehicle cuts in front of the truck or slows too sharply.

Volvo trucks with VEC do not need to be in cruise to initiate active braking. When traveling above 20 MPH the driver warnings will be given and the system will reduce engine speed, apply the engine brake and apply the foundation brakes.

PASSIVE SAFETY

At Volvo Trucks, safety isn't an option. It's standard. In fact, safety is one of our core values. We've been recognized as the industry's leading safety innovator for more than 85 years. And our competitors repeatedly benchmark our vehicles as the standard in commercial vehicle safety. Maintaining a safe and risk-free fleet is essential to operating a successful transportation business. That's why Volvo uses High Strength Steel in our cabs. It's why we always meet and exceed the world's toughest impact tests. It's what makes a Volvo one of the safest trucks on the road.

IMPACT STANDARDS

The rugged design is a direct result of our extensive program of crash testing. In fact, every Volvo meets and exceeds the grueling standards of the Swedish Cab Impact Test—the toughest test in the world that simulates a collision. This tests the cab's front corner to simulate a rollover, the rear of the cab to simulate the payload impact, and the roof of the cab to simulate the vehicle coming to rest on its roof. Doors should not open during the test, but must be able to be opened after the test.

Our crash test standards also include Volvo's 30-mph Offset Barrier Test, designed to replicate running into the back of a stopped trailer at 50 mph, with impact occurring above the frame rails. In this test, most of the energy is absorbed by the cooling package, engine, and cab. If a Volvo is in a frontal impact, the engine and transmission are designed to break free from their mounts and drop down below the cab floor—protecting the driver space along the cab floor and helping to prevent entrapment of the driver's feet.

HIGH STRENGTH STEEL CAB

Each Volvo truck is built for protection. Volvo is the only truck manufacturer with an integral cab and sleeper constructed exclusively of High Strength Steel (HSS), including the sleeper compartment. High Strength Steel has the highest strength-to-weight ratio in the industry, which allows us to build a stronger cab while reducing weight. We also use double-sided galvanized steel that's welded for greater durability and corrosion protection.

Volvo offers a system of safety measures that work together to protect the driver in a collision. A driver-side airbag is standard in every Volvo truck. The engine mounts are designed to release during a frontal impact, pushing the engine and transmission down under the chassis rather than into the cab. And during an accident the energy-absorbing steering column collapses away from the driver.

FEWER DISTRACTIONS

Another important active safety feature is Volvo's I-Shift automated transmission. With automated shifting, drivers can keep their eyes on the road and both hands on the steering wheel. There's no distraction of trying to find the right gear. Drivers are less fatigued and more alert, which helps reduce accident rates and lower operating costs. And thanks to the two-pedal system, I-Shift makes it easier to train new drivers and retain older, more experienced drivers.
